The merchant had arrived at his office as early as 7 o'clock, and minutes after he got down to his deak a foxy-looking, bright-faced boy came in. The merchant was reading, the boy, with his hat off, stood there the boy, with his hat off, stood there expectantly, but saying nothing. At the end of two minutes he coughed slightly and said:

"Excuse me, sir, but I'm in a hurry." The merchant looked up.

"What do you want?" he asked.

"I want a job, if you've got one for me," replied the boy.

"Oh, do you?" snorted the merchant.
"Well, what are you in such a hurry about?"

about?"

"Tve got to be, that's why," was "I've got to be, that's why." was the sharp response. "I left school yeaterday evening to go to work, and I haven't got a place yet, and I can't afford to be wasting time. If you can't do anything for me say so and I'll skip. The only place where I can stop long is the place where I can stop long is the place where they pay me for it." The merchant looked at the clock, "When can you come?" he asked. "I don't have to come." replied the youngster; "I'm here now, and I'd been at work before this if you'd said so." Half an hour later he was at it, and he's likely to have a job as long as he wants it.—Boston Post.
